

Re-Careering Made Easy

“It’s tough to keep a positive attitude or even think of beginning a new career when the bottom falls out of your world. Especially when the company you work for closes its doors and you find yourself unemployed.”

Re-careering is a fact of life today. Market forces stop many companies that once seemed unstoppable. It happened to Angela and until she found Renaissance Personnel Group, she felt alone. She had doubts about how the skills she’d honed and the knowledge she’d accrued would transfer to a new industry. But she was forced to find a new beginning. She came to Renaissance Personnel Group to help her figure it out.

One thing Renaissance knew was that Angela’s next career move must be to a place that not only recognized her experience but matched her personality and core values too. Success comes through matching person and place.

Fourteen days after meeting Angela, Renaissance selected her for a temporary assignment. The Renaissance team had determined that Angela’s work ethic was an ideal match to this client’s corporate culture. Three months later, Angela was rewarded for outstanding performance and offered a full-time job with the company.

Angela thanked the Renaissance team for “somehow knowing exactly what I was looking for all along, even though I hadn’t known!”

Change for the better.
renaissancepersonnel.com